To Whom It May Concern:

I have known the bearer of this letter, a Mr. John Ironside, through his association with the firm of B & G Security Consultants Inc., and have found him to be a reliable, technically competent and highly intelligent individual who I do not doubt to be capable of any task to which he is assigned.

I have had occasion to see his work in matters of public relations, computer work - including, but not limited to: web page layout and design, the preparation of public relations materials and computer diagnostics and repair. I would note that his work in the repair and re-working of several somewhat dated computers that I personally own is representative of the best repair work that I have encountered in the field in London.

John is also a personable, articulate, presentable and reliable individual who is capable of communicating well with senior management and line staff in a variety of social and professional situations.

Should have a work situation available for him I do not doubt that he will do it justice and can only strongly recommend him for the same.

Should you have any further questions and enquiries please do not hesitate to contact the undersigned.

Yours truly,
